

Why do you need to control weeds?

If weeds are growing uncontrollably around your office premises, you may soon notice an increase in unwanted pests in your vicinity. Bundle professional weed control with your existing pest management program for maximum effectiveness.

PESTS AND POISON: Weeds provide shelter to various pests and animals, such as cockroaches and rats. Avoid nasty surprises by keeping the lawn neatly mowed down and cleared from unwanted weeds.

Some weeds are poisonous and may cause irritation when ingested. You have a corporate social responsibility towards all stakeholders who visit your premises so it is important to eliminate possible health hazards.

AESTHETICALLY UNPLEASANT: Do your customers frequent your office? Health concerns caused by uncontrolled weeds may have a detrimental effect on your corporate reputation. Ensure your office is fit for visitors by regularly eliminating weeds and pests.

FIRE HAZARD: Garden weeds can become a fire hazard to properties located in moderate to high fire danger areas. Overgrown weeds can change the burning patterns of bushfires and can either help build a fire or spread it in the wrong direction.

Some gardeners will take it upon themselves to maintain the weeds in their yard. Yet some gardeners simply don't have the energy or ability to slave over yard maintenance. In addition, some gardeners find themselves fighting a downhill battle as their garden has been totally overrun by weeds.
